

Election Year Special Series 4 Trailer

Hello and welcome to Series 4 of Let's Go Further, a podcast from the Skills and Education Group that aims to challenge the way we think about skills and education.

In this series, a collaboration with FE Week, we're shining a spotlight on the FE and skills policy issues that should take centre stage at the upcoming general election.

I'm Shane Chowen, editor of FE Week, and for this special pre-election series, I'm delighted to be your host. I'll be talking to leading experts and insiders, and getting answers to a simple question: What do we need from the next government? How does the next government get the right skills to the right people? What exactly needs to change to help providers step up on AI and the green economy, and how well is the sector positioned to fight for the resources that it needs?

This is a series not to be missed in a year that could reshape further education for decades to come. So, if you want the inside track on the future of further education, skills, and apprenticeships, make sure you join us for another inspiring and insightful series of Let's Go Further.

Episode 1 is out March 26th.